About Cornucopia Project

The Cornucopia Project, Inc. is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization leading hands-on nutrition education in New Hampshire. The mission of Cornucopia Project is to plant seeds for a lifetime of healthy eating through garden, kitchen and farm education. Cornucopia Project envisions a resilient community that celebrates healthy food, hands-on learning and environmental sustainability. Gardening with children since 2005, our interdisciplinary programs connect youth to the local foods system. We foster curiosity and stewardship of the natural world while introducing the essential skills of growing and preparing nutritious, delicious foods. In addition to educational activities, Cornucopia Project works with schools, youth groups and local organizations to improve nutrition and local food access.

Cornucopia Project's students grow vegetables, herbs and native flowers at nine school gardens and at our two acre Educational Farm. Our organically-grown produce is provided to school cafeterias and classrooms; and to the community through: programs and projects, two local food pantries, community suppers, and our Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) Membership. Our teaching model and resources are shared statewide and nationally through farm to school networks and we lead the Monadnock Region branch of the New Hampshire Farm to School Network. Growing gardens, providing healthy food for families, bringing students into the kitchen, and inspiring future food system advocates are some of the ways that Cornucopia Project works for a healthier future for all.

Cornucopia Project team is comprised of a Board of Directors, and an Executive Director, five year-round staff, eight student fellows, and seasonal adjunct educators. Our $480,000 organizational budget is supported by individual donations, grants, foundations, sponsors, and educational contracts. For more information please visit: www.cornucopiaproject.org
